Walking Corpse Syndrome

Author's Notes:
I hope you like it... This is the first Ficmas story I've ever done.

Per glanced out the window, squinting at the bright sunlight of the northern outdoors before retreating to his dark room.

He watched and observed the death-related paraphernalia scattered around his home such as the dead crow in the jar, the inverted crosses hanging on the walls and the bloody knife that laid on the counter.

His skin was pale and he just seemed very lamented; hollow and lifeless. He felt no emotion nor pain when he looked down at the faded gashes on his arms. He felt that he never had a soul that existed.

He was dead inside.
